

A man wearing a yellow t-shirt, a baseball cap, and sunglasses is standing outdoors and speaking. He is gesturing with his hands. Behind him is a wooden fence and a recycling sign. To his right is a large pile of rocks. In the foreground, there is a white table with some items on it.

“The Oyster Toss” - Campers wrote messages of encouragement on oyster shells and tossed them into the Bay for new spat to attach to. Here, a young camper holds up a clump of oysters found near the shore, evidence that young oysters flourish in Camp Kekoka’s waters to help clean the Bay.
